ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image processing apparatus includes a first unit that converts image area information related to a predetermined image area of image data into predetermined information and a second unit that 5   attaches the predetermined information to the image data. The predetermined information is coordinates of a rectangle, and the second unit attaches the coordinates to the image data as a tag based on a predetermined format.